VOL. 19 (JULY 2012) BY EDITORS

For this month's issue, EEFB looked back at some films screened during the Transilvania International Film Festival last month. Alina Popescu saw Tudor Giurgiu's Of Snails and Men - a comedy set in 1992 in which 1000 workers from a Romanian factory donate their sperm, thus hoping to answer the bankruptcy of their employer. Ana Ribeiro saw Benedek Fliegau's Just the Wind - a drama centering on a Gypsie family trying to survive in a hostile environment - as well as Maja Miloš's Clip. Miloš's debut feature revolves around a young girl who turns to sex and drugs to cope with her family problems. In our Interviews section, you will also find a conversation with the Serbian directress. Finally, we saw Slobodan Šijan's Who's Singin' Over There? for our 2012 Balkan focus, a Yugoslav cult comedy set during the Second World War. EEFB editors Moritz Pfeifer & Konstanty Kuzma
